Q: Creating custom login pages (i.e. different than the one set in the admin panel) I'm currently working on a site that uses the same login form for both the admin and the frontend. What I would like to do, is to create a different login page for the frontend. I've looked for a plugin, or something I can configure in the system, to do that, but found nothing. Is this possible? Thanks. A: I think you can achieve this with a simple hook_menu. The module then calls the login form, and if the user is not authenticated, then redirects them to the page you want. If you want to do it in a manner that you can manage through the UI (ie: simply add a link to the login page within your UI, or add any other page), I think that Drupal 7 already offers you a method to do so. It seems like you will need to write a custom module to do this. `drupal_goto("user/login", array("user-login" => "username", "password" => "password"))` Carbon dioxide insufflation versus gravity repositioning during pneumoperitoneum-induced hypothermia in an experimental rabbit model. We performed a prospective randomized study to compare the effects of carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>) insufflation and gravity-induced abdominal deflation on body temperature during pneumoperitoneum-induced hypothermia. Twenty adult female New Zealand white rabbits were enrolled in this study. An endotracheal tube was placed to artificially breathe the animals during laparotomy. The animals were randomly allocated to two study groups: CO<sub>2</sub> insufflation group (n = 10, CO<sub>2</sub> was insufflated into the peritoneal cavity for 5 minutes before pneumoperitoneum was induced) and gravity group (n = 10, the pneumoperitoneum was induced after the abdomen was extracted by gravity). The median time from laparotomy to pneumoperitoneum was approximately 29 seconds (range, 26 to 33 seconds). The median duration of pneumoperitoneum was 7 minutes (range, 4.5 to 7.5 minutes). During pneumoperitoneum-induced hypothermia, the rectal temperature in the CO<sub>2</sub> insufflation group (35.8 degrees C +/- 0.22 degrees C) was significantly higher than that in the gravity group (33.5 degrees C +/- 0.25
