I've been trying to figure out what causes it but nothing conclusive has turned up. It has happened to me too, but not on my own face. I don't know how to prevent it, though. I'm sure it's not the heat. I work outside on the most humid and hottest days of the year and I don't sweat at all, and I live in New Mexico. It has happened to me too, but not on my own face. I don't know how to prevent it, though. I'm sure it's not the heat. I work outside on the most humid and hottest days of the year and I don't sweat at all, and I live in New Mexico. Click to expand... Hey, it's me. If you sweat, it's either a) you have eczema, or b) you are allergic to something. Eczema causes many things, including extreme sweating. The cracks can also happen from lack of sun exposure, which is true of many of us. If you can, get out and take a suntan whenever you can. I know I'm pathetic about it. Good luck. When he was a baby, he had a diaper rash that came and went like a daily thunderstorm. He was constantly wet, itchy, and red. I would bathe him, and he would have
